ot set aside the verdict on the ground that it was contrary to the law and evidence. Judge Shackelford said that he would hear argument on the motion on Thursday.

There was no application for bail, and Mrs. Hall was turned over to the sheriff. To-night she lies in jail a convicted murderess. On a cot beside her sleeps her youngest brother, Hubert H. Dowdy. It was on his arm hert H. Dowdy. It was on his arm that, before the eyes of hundreds of people who had known her best, she walked in tears to her cell. At the home of N. W. Hall—always referred to as "Old Man Hall"—Essie and Ma-mie Dunkum are being cared for. But neither sleeps to-night. Within a quarter of a mile stands their home, dark and empty, a drear, gaunt-look-ling building, hiding and inclosing the blood of a murdered man. And not fat from the scene of his former activity steeps Victor Hall. Of that fam. ivity sleeps Victor Hall. Of that family he is the only one who rests to-tight. He has been avenged. The law night. He has been avenged. The law will exact its toll. His death has been proven at the door of the wife, who, a short time ago, swore at the altar to love and cherish him through sickness and health; and twelve men to-day condemned her before the world. Some of them wept while considering some of them wept write considering their decision. They wept for "Old Man Hall" and his wife, parents of the murdered man. For Mrs. Elizabeth Hall they had no tears. Particularly they re-had no tears. Particularly they re-membered the children, and among themselves they said that they would not send these girls' mother to pris-on for life. At first two spoke for the electric chair, and one said that five years in prison would be sufficient. But they counseled among themselves a they counseled among themselves a little while more, remembering again those two little girls, and mercy came into their hearts; so in their minds they tempered justice with merey, and in time the law will give back their mother to Essie and Mamie Dunkum.

Many had thought that Mr. Gordon's effort would sway the minds of the jury away from all suspicion, or at least leave in them a reasonable doubt as to the guilt of the accused. Yes lish. To complete the deception, his men carried their rifles at the shoulder. They got to within fifty yards of general headquarters, when the gendarmes recognized them and opened fire. Violent street fighting followed, and the Germans were driven out of the city. General Leman then transferred his headquarters to one of the forts.
